GARY HOLMES

LOCAL 933
PRESIDENT

Greetings Brothers and Sisters,

It began in the midst of the Great Depression; the modern legal right to organize arose when the National Labor Relations Act of 1935 (NLRA), also known as the Wagner Act, was signed into law by President Franklin Roosevelt. That's when things began to change. In years prior, the government wanted nothing to do with business-worker relationships, choosing to let the market rule. Factory workers in the 1930's worked in extremely unsafe environments with no voice or power to improve their conditions. There was a daily risk of severe injury, lingering health issues, even death. As if those factors weren't enough, workers were faced with the growing threat of automation and unsustainable line speed increases. It was from this movement that the UAW was founded in 1935.

The Wagner Act gave unions legal grounds to stand on. Section 7 of the NLRA specifically states: "Employees shall have the right to self-organize...., [and] to bargain collectively..."

The right to organize is grounded in our natural right to free association which is memorialized in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.

Here is a brief summary of just a few of our history notes about UAW Local 933.

- UAW Local 933 was chartered by the International Union in September of 1941 (80 years ago this year).
- In an attempt to organize the Allison plants, it took until 1944 to win an election were as the NLRB then granted UAW Local 933 full bargaining rights within these plants.
- In 1944 a local union paper "The Rocket" was edited by F.J. Dalton from the International Staff. This was to keep the workers informed.
- In May, 1945 the bargaining committee signed the first Local Seniority Agreement with the approval of the Membership.

It's a huge milestone to still be Standing Strong in Solidarity 80 years later. With this in mind your Local Union leadership decided we should celebrate this event with all of our union brothers and sisters along with their families. It's important for the communities around us to know that we are still here as well, so the charity of choice for that day will be The Indiana Sheriff's Youth Ranch. For more information on the Indiana Sheriff's Youth Ranch, follow them on Twitter or Facebook at handles @INYouthRanch, Call 317-460-4242 or email ScottMinier@yahoo.com. This event will take place at UAW Local 933 located at 2320 South Tibbs Ave, Indianapolis, Indiana 46241 on Saturday August 28, 2021. Watch the union bulletin boards and the UAW local 933 website for more information as it becomes available.

Currently, as I'm writing this article, we are still planning on having a membership meeting on Sunday June 13, 2021. I have invited guest from ISYR and Wayne Township to attend our meeting as well. Safety protocols will be in place as per the State and County guidelines at that time. Your Executive Board has done an outstanding job of approving the improvements and updates here at the union hall while staying within the budget. On behalf of the Executive Board we are thankful for your continued support.

In Solidarity,

EDUCATING OUR MEMBERSHIP

Educating our Membership is a great way to make our Union stronger. Recently our UAW Education Department has made available education online. This is a great way to learn about subjects like, Union History, Standing Committees, Roles of Officers, and the UAW Constitution. As an example, (Weingarten Rights on adjacent page) understanding your rights to representation is vital for every Union represented employee. Your right to representation during an investigatory interview could be the difference between keeping and losing your job.

As Union representation, it is our responsibility to ensure our members are educated on their rights, as well as other integral parts that make unions function. As you can see on the adjacent page, your Weingarten Rights are a Supreme Court Decision that will protect your right to Union representation.

So how can you get involved in your Union and become better Union-savvy? There are several different ways. One of the easiest is joining a standing committee. The UAW Constitution states the following below:

Article 44 Local Union Committees

Article 44 of the UAW Constitution requires the local union to establish ten local union committees. These committees have defined functions to perform for the local union membership. The local union shall have the following standing committees: 1) Citizenship and Legislative (CAP) 2) Civil and Human Rights Committee 3) Community Services Committee 4) Consumer Affairs 5) Conservation and Recreation Committee 6) Constitution and Bylaws Committee 7) Education Committee 8) Union Label Committee 9) Veterans Committee 10) Women's Committee and such other committees as they deem necessary. Article 44 further states that all committee members should be appointed or elected subject to the discretion of the local union or unit workplace organization in the case of an amalgamated local union.

This Fall 2021, the UAW Education Department will offer on-line courses to help educate our Membership. These courses will be offered in three sections and on a work-at-your-own-pace schedule. I recently completed all 30 courses and believe these to be very beneficial in teaching our Membership including retirees, a pathway to grow and educate themselves on being union. If you are interested, there will be some flyers distributed when schedules are established by the UAW Education Department.

If we want a stronger Union, we have to educate our Members and get them involved. Your elected officials want you to be proud of our Union. Your hard work is appreciated, along with the dues you pay to support our efforts in Solidarity.

WEINGARTEN RIGHTS (UAW Education Department)

Every union-represented employee has rights that are protected by law. One advantage you have as a union member is the right to have a union representative with you when your employer asks you to answer questions that could lead to your discipline or employment termination.

The right to have a union representative with you during an “investigatory interview” is from the United States Supreme Court decision National Labor Relations Board v. J. Weingarten, Inc. The union member rights that are established by that decision are called Weingarten Rights.

You may wonder why you would want or need a union representative in the room with you during an investigatory interview that could lead to your discipline or termination. What could go wrong? You’re a good worker and have nothing to hide!

There are many reasons why your Weingarten Rights are important and you should feel free to exercise them whenever the need arises.

- You can consult privately with your union representative and receive advice before answering employer questions.
- Your union representative can serve as a witness to your answers and defend your version of the investigatory interview if necessary.
- Your union representative can ask the employer to clarify unclear or confusing questions on your behalf.
- Your union representative can raise contract language and other facts that may cause the employer to shorten or end the investigatory interview.

These are only a few of the reasons why it’s important to know that you can count on your union representative to help you through what is likely to be a stressful meeting with your employer.

STEP-BY-STEP PROCEDURES TO GET YOU THROUGH

1. As soon as the employer contacts you to ask questions about a matter that you think could result in your discipline or discharge, say that you want your union representative to accompany you. The employer does not have to raise this option with you unless your collective bargaining agreement requires that notification. In any case, it’s always best to say that you want your union representative to be with you in the interview.
2. When your union representative arrives, the employer must tell the representative what is being investigated.
3. You have the right to meet privately with your union representative before the investigatory interview.
4. During the investigatory interview, your union representative can make sure that the employer’s questions to you are clear and fair. They can also raise contract language and other facts to support you.
5. After the interview ends, your union representative can make arguments to the employer to support you and meet with you to discuss next steps.

WHAT IF THE EMPLOYER DOESN’T WANT TO CONDUCT THE INTERVIEW WITH MY UNION REPRESENTATIVE PRESENT?

While you have a right to have your union representative present during an investigatory interview, the employer is permitted by law to take one of three actions.

The employer can grant your request.

The employer can refuse your request and end the interview.

The employer can ask you to choose whether you want to 1) have the interview without your union representative or 2) end the interview. We recommend that if the employer asks you to make one of these two choices, you choose to end the interview.

Note that the employer cannot refuse your request for a union representative when your collective bargaining agreement requires that your union representative be contacted and present for members who are called by the employer to an investigatory interview.

Workers' Memorial Day

How easily we move through our days, witnessing thousands of wonders, yet taking them for granted because they are, to our undiscerning eyes, so very common.

We often fail to realize that there were amazing people who lived incredible lives; people who sacrificed much (and sometimes everything) to conceive and build the extraordinary modern conveniences we have come to see as “ordinary”. It wasn’t so long ago that everything from the clothes we wear to the buildings we inhabit were built in extremely dangerous conditions, lacking the rules and regulations that serve to keep workers safe in modern industry. Workers’

Memorial Day commemorates the lives sacrificed in the pursuit of our modern comfort and convenience, and it stands for the worldwide efforts to create safety in the workplace.

In April of 1970, Workers’ Memorial Day was established to bring awareness to the hundreds of thousands of people all over the world who died while simply doing their jobs. This day of observation was established in the same year that the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) became law in the United States, legislation that helped to both standardize and enforce safety protocols. It did not take long before this same practice was picked up and implemented in industrialized countries all over the world.

Our celebration of Workers’ Memorial Day is an important part of promoting safety and honoring those who have given their lives to the job. We work in a complex and dangerous environment that requires careful, thoughtful adherence to the rules and procedures. Failure to do so can have disastrous consequences. Remember those who have paid the ultimate price and, in doing so, have made our lives safer. Honor their memories by doing your part to continually promote safe work practices. Practice safety yourself and encourage those around you to adhere to the practices and principles that keep us all safe. If you have known workers who died on the job, spend some time remembering them and sharing their stories. Always report unsafe conditions and, where possible, get involved in resolving them. Everyone deserves to go home at the end of the workday; Workers’ Memorial Day reminds us of those who did not make it there. May their sacrifices encourage us to take the necessary steps to make sure that all of us get home safely today and every day.

June is National Safety Month, and with the U.S. seeing the highest number of workplace deaths since 2007 – 5,333 fatal workplace injuries in 2019 – this observance is more important than ever.

Weekly Topics:

Week 1 - Prevent Incidents Before They Start: Identifying risks and taking proactive safety measures to reduce hazard exposure on important topics from ergonomics to chemical management is crucial to creating a safe workplace.

Week 2 - Address Ongoing COVID-19 Safety Concerns: As the pandemic continues, employers play an important role in the return to physical workspaces, building trust around vaccines, mental health, and so much more.

Week 3 – It is Vital to Feel Safe on the Job: Being able to be one’s self at work without fear of retaliation is necessary for an inclusive safety culture. We are focused on not only physical safety, but psychological safety as well.

Week 4 - Advance Your Safety Journey: Safety is all about continuous improvement. Whether organizationally or individually, your UAW Safety Team is here to provide guidance for the path forward.

to access the application form and scholarship rules on the Richard T. Gosser Scholarship Program.

RON LONG

RETIREE
CHAIRMAN

Spring is just around the corner and warmer weather is in the forecast. I was surprised to see that there was also snow in the forecast and that is unusual for this time of year. That is Mother Nature's way of letting us know who is in charge. Seasons change, weather changes and just about everything around us changes. It has been over a year since we had a retiree meeting and I get so many calls wanting to know when we will meet again. I wish I had a good answer and can share that information with my fellow retirees. A date gets set and it changes. The pandemic is not giving up and super spreader events only cast more doubt on when we will meet. I recently received a letter from our retiree Rep. Danny Ernstes.

I will share some on the letter with you as it was written.

The pandemic at this point has taken an unfortunate path as there are new, highly infectious Covid-19 variants and increasing case surges in multiple states, especially Michigan, expanding positivity rates of infection, growing cases per 100,000 population data, and increasing hospitalization. Health orders in most states have been easing and vaccines are being distributed at acceptable levels, yet this terrible pandemic continues to spread.

Normalcy will not occur until herd immunity has been achieved through continued vaccination efforts. Doctors and scientists are expecting to reach 70% herd immunity by late 2021.

The letter goes on to say that all events at our Black Lake facility will be cancelled until January 2022. There will be a review around November 2021 and there is hope a decision will be made for the future.

I also received a letter from Raye Ohl with a request from our International President Rory Gamble. In the letter President Gamble requested that all events and meetings be suspended until June 30, 2021. I have a duty as Chairman of our great chapter to honor the directive from our International President and effective as of now, all meetings will be suspended until July!

Now that word again Change. I never in my wildest imagination thought that we would go a year with no meetings. I have seen so many changes in the last few months that I truly wonder if we will ever know normal again.

We have experienced events we never imagined. I attended my first drive through funeral. I have attended funerals where only a few were allowed and had to maintain a 6-foot social distancing. I had a doctor appointment on the telephone and that works but not the same as face-to-face appointment. I had two court appearances for some legal action I was experiencing. I can see this procedure being used more and more in the future. I recently had a knee replacement and that can be a lonely experience when visitors are not allowed to visit. These are a few of the examples of changes that we all have or will experience during this pandemic.

Change is a verb, alter, vary, modify, mean to make of, become different, change implies making either an essential difference often amounting to a loss of original identity or a substitution of one thing for another. There is static change, dynamic and dynamical changes. Change is inevitable like age. We are all a year older like Harold Bashore 94 soon to be 95 and John Reynolds turning 90. Dynamic change is putting on a few pounds, hair turning whiter and so on.

Change is constant and when we do start to meet again we will notice many changes around us. I talk with so many, and we all agree that we are ready to meet again. The sooner the better!

Let me change the subject one last time and say how much we all miss getting together and we will be glad to get together again. Our Local 933 will be celebrating its' 80th Year Anniversary in August. So, if you have keepsakes you would like to share, let us know. With that, on behalf of the executive body, Don, BZ, Shirley and JoAnn, we wish you a great day and look forward to a gathering soon.

In Solidarity,

Ron Long
